My dear Papa.

Another one of those nice boxes of oranges and grape fruit came yesterday, and we are having a wonderful time eating them. Meta says, "You, ~~for~~ know I have the goodest Granddaddy;" and Bruce says, "Yes, but I wish he would hurry up and come on with that chewing gum!" They are both grown! I have never seen any thing to equal the way they have gotten big all of a sudden.

Ah! Telsey and Al have another little girl. Isn't that bad? She is named Mary Beverly, for Telsey's sister.

Let me tell you some thing interesting. Commencement begins next week and Brother John is to preach the commencement next sermon, and Wednesday night but next Sunday T. T. has been asked to talk. I have told him that he has got to do his best and make Brother John look like two cents the following Wednesday day. I have gotten a cook for commencement. Don't you think I am smart? I have cooked for three months.

P. please make haste and come I see like Bruce. It is a mighty long wait between chewing gum.

Please come to commencement

We want you so much.

Kiss the children and Pally for me and just know that all of your children here send you love and kisses — Devotedly Grace.
